The N-bomb is not merely an answer to Khrushchev's 50-megaton package.

It is a death-ray weapon, which produces death without destruction. It blasts out a controlled storm of unseen, unfelt neutrons over a mile-wide area. It can penetrate three feet of concrete.

It kills troops in their tanks and at their gun positions, destroying the weapons ready for instant use by an advancing force. It can drop stenographers at their typewriters, scientists at their computers, businessmen at their desks without damage to their [illegible] and [illegible] scattered from a window-[illegible] ing job.

FEAR SOVIET MAY HAVE OWN N-BOMB

The N-bomb is a controlled thermonuclear detonation—a sort of second cousin to the H-bomb. Its blast and heat effects are held to a bare minimum, and the force of the weapon goes into producing in a flash the lethal neutron radiation.

These are the high hopes of the American scientists who believe [illegible] cities or parts of cities, against anything that could be deemed a
